Connected Educator Resources and Articles

Take some time to understand the Connected Learning Framework and explore the research that is the foundation for this education agenda. What resonates with you? What would you like to act upon in your own school? What elements are already happening in your school's learning community? How can you foster more opportunities for all learners?

Professional Development – Free and Accessible

You cannot wait for professional development to come to you – you must go out there and grab it for yourself, anytime, anywhere that it is convenient for you. There are some wonderful resources that support you as a lifelong learner in the field of education.

K12 Online Conference

<http://k12onlineconference.org/>

The largest, free, online, open K12 Conference for educators, where resources and recordings are available all year long. In the fall, real-time events take place with each new conference year (usually in October). The conference archives and resources are accessible all the time.

MOOCs for K-12

A directory of Massively Open Online Courses for the K-12 community.

eSchool News: Webinars

<http://www.eschoolnews.com/events/webinars/>

Access free webinars around the topic of educational technology.

Try this one as a sample: “How to be a Connected School Leader”

<http://www.eschoolnews.com/2013/10/08/connected-school-leader/>

EdWeb: Professional Learning Communities for Educators

<http://home.edweb.net/>

This is a wonderful collection of PLCs, representing a wide range of topics and interests. Edweb also offers free Webinars led by experts and innovators in the field.

Connected Learning.tv

<http://connectedlearning.tv/>

This is the Digital Media and Learning Research Hub and originators of research on connected learning and how youth interact with new media. Access research documents, infographics, videos, an archive of previous webinars and a calendar of upcoming webinars.

Open Educational Resources Commons

<http://www.oercommons.org/>

Literally any topic or interest you have in education is represented in these open and freely accessible resources, courses and groups. There is also an option to contribute your own resources and start a group of your own.

Online Communities

Try one or two of these online communities to explore the resources and depth of conversations. It's OK to lurk before diving in with your own active comments!

ISTE's Communities

<https://www.iste.org/connect>

ISTE, the International Society for Technology in Education, is the leading educators' organization that sets standards for educational technology and modern learning. ISTE offers a variety of "connected" communities. With an ISTE membership, you will automatically receive the organization's journal, Leading and Learning With Technology.

Classroom 2.0

<http://www.classroom20.com/>

This is a "ning" community for educators interested in using and applying Web 2.0 and collaborative technologies.

The Educator's PLN: The Personal Learning Network for Educators

<http://edupln.ning.com/group/edchat>

A "ning" that is tied to the #edchat weekly conversation, boasting over 16,000 members!

EdWeb

<http://home.edweb.net/>

Join this community and access loads of free webinars and conversations specific to your area of interest. Professional groups include topics like blended learning, the brain and learning, flipped instruction, game-based learning, Leadership 3.0: Essential Skills for Innovative Principals and more.

Library Thing

<http://www.librarything.com/>

Library Thing is a collaborative site that supports you in creating your own "reading group" and encourages you to review books and read what others have to say about books. Titles are "tagged," allowing you to search by topics and categories easily.

JEDLAB

<https://www.facebook.com/groups/jdsmedialab/>

Just formed in 2013, PEJE's Ken Gordon leads JEDLAB, which now boasts over 2,300 members. This is a vibrant education community dedicated to innovation and transformation. Check it out on Facebook and follow at #jedlab.

Edmodo

<https://www.edmodo.com/>

Edmodo is a clean social network interface that caters to the K-12 community. Edmodo not only offers you the opportunity to have a private class space (for free), but you can also join professional development communities of educators, once you have an account set up.

Twitter Hashtags:

Try following a few of these hashtags for a week or two. Pick out a few voices that resonate with you. Watch for other hashtags posted at the end of tweets. Think of tweets as a trail of breadcrumbs leading you to learning nuggets.
